Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Man Who Couldn't Feel Rich When it became clear that Sam meant exactly that, the property improvement people promptly hove into view. There was no doubt about the place being in a definite state of decline and then some, and Sam, sighing a bit as he eyed the saggy-looking, moth-eaten small frame building and the dilapidated grounds around it, said for them to go ahead and fix it up. Well, it was quite an undertaking. Everything from new landscaping to new supporting beams were involved. The biggest single doing, though, was the roof. It truly had been pretty much gone. Good gosh, Sam, one of the contractors exclaimed, why, you were practically living in the open! It must have flooded the inside of this place when it rained! Sam shrugged a bit sheepishly and said, Well, it doesn't rain much around here, you know. And once in a while, when I'd go to bed, and I'd look up and see the sky was on the threatening side, I'd go down in the basement to sleep. In two weeks, though, Sam had one of the brightest, coziest little homes in town. It was really a treat to see. People would come and gasp at it as though they could hardly believe their eyes. And at first Sam got quite a big kick out of all this. Or at least he seemed to, although there were some who said afterwards that from the beginning they detected a kind of letdown in Sam's natural chipperness and high good humor. Anyhow, it became quite evident in the passing weeks that something was...
